

One of the goals of the FCC is to regulate against monopolies. Allowing companies to control television, radio and now print media is not in the best interests of the American public. Do not repeal the law prohibiting companies from owning newspaper and television stations in the same location. Most Americans still rely on these sources to get their news. The Internet is still not completely reliable so we need the old standbys to maintain their integrity. Allowing fewer choices for news is not the best way to have an informed citizenry. These regulations allow more voices and opinions on the news. We need more and not less.
